

week of apr 01: explore the concept of time in your writing. play with the idea of how we perceive passing time [linear/cyclical/all at once/not at all] and make it weird and surreal, or maybe go more classic & write some fun time travel/time loop fiction. how does time shape us?

content warnings: smoking. also may be a nightmare for screenreaders she's on the computer and i'm smoking on her bed pixelated music coming out of her speakers the soft chatter of kids playing outside

she's on the computer and
i'm smoking on her bed
pixelated music
coming out of her speakers
the soft sound of her voice
"do you think this sounds alright?"

i nod yes;
i don't know how to elaborate

she's on the computer and
i'm laying on her bed
pixelated music
coming out of her speakers
the soft sound of her voice
"do you think this..."

she's on the computer and
i'm smoking on her bed

the soft sound of her voice
"everything's gonna be alright"

i nod yes;
"i love what you did with the drums"

i shake my head

she's on the computer and

i'm smoking on my bed
pixelated music
coming out of my headphones we're laying on her bed the soft sound of my voice to no response –

i think she's asleep

it's quiet.